Delltone cut cloth for changing times

FIFTY-THREE years young, the Deltone are hitting the road again.

Founding member Ian "Peewee" Wilson said after expanding to a six, then five member, band since the '80s the group, which began as a vocal harmony quartet, were returning to their roots with this year's departure of Danny Masters.

"After a six-week rehearsal changing keys and harmonies, the boys are taking more lead vocals," Mr Wilson said.

Changing styles to include surfing music, expanding the line-up and starting to play their own instruments through the '80s, the group had always built a strong foundation with their harmonies and live show, he said.

Describing the band as "unashamed crowd pleasers" the group incorporated theatre and cabaret with music aimed at the heart and feet.

Lighting up, India-style

THE CBD's King George Square was well lit on Friday evening for Diwali, the Indian festival of lights.

Bracken Ridge's Aditi Maharaj was part of the action and said it was a fun and colourful event.

The former dance teacher at Boondall said the festival showcased Indian culture in Australia.

Federation of Indian Communities Queensland secretary and festival chief organiser Unnikrishnan V.P. said the festival aimed to improve cultural tolerance and to promote community harmony.

"Countries around the world celebrate Diwali and it has become an important annual event in major cities worldwide," he said.

Local and international Indian artists performed as part of the festival.
